

PSB Tape

This pretty much speaks for itself. You now have your very own PSB bootleg :-). It starts with a very recent gig at the Tin Angel which is Philly's main acoustic venue. This is from a show where I opened for Eric Andersen. Accompanying me is my favorite guitar player (to play with) at the moment Jim Fogarty, who I used whenever I can afford him. Actually he offered to do this show for free. Luckily I sold a few Cds and was able to give him some money anyway.

The next segment is from my appearance at a songwriter's night last summer at the Bluebird in Nashville. Playing with me is another old friend Ray DiSilvis who played on my very first demo and now lives there.

Next is the Fumblers again almost totally unplugged. This was at a tiny coffeehouse here in Philly and in typical Fumblers fashion we did a lot of songs about coffee. Anyway the only person plugged in is the bass player. The rest is totally acoustic. There wasn't even a sound system. There was a guy there recording the other band on the bill with a DAT so we got him to do us too.

Finally there's 3 more songs of me totally solo (which is how I usually play these days). This was also at the Tin Angel, I think at a gig where I opened for Roger McGuinn, but I'm not positive it's from that show. I'm not ecstatic about the distorted guitar sound on the tape, which is why I made the sure at the last show the sound was good on the tape.

One other thing man, I would appreciate it greatly if you would not make any copies of either this tape or the video (not that anyone would want them), but I ain't big enough to be bootlegged yet. Thanks.
